Science is filled with non-vegan activities, which aren't fair to the animals. Even if we discover something, it comes at a cost. Instead, we can do scientific activities that're vegan, like citizen science projects that find exoplanets and do computational drug discovery. There are simple family-friendly science experiments found on youtube and places like Google Maker Camp that prove you can have fun as a scientist and still be vegan. Here's one example:

Fractal Ink Jets That Power Spiral Motion
