

■ 8

19

2 0

3 20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

20

2

Background

Much of the debates as to how to lead to the most impact of a cause centers around who to focus on. For instance, with veganism, people feel that fake meats should be promoted, because it increases more people towards a vegan lifestyle than before. However, if those who are in it likely do not believe that fake meats are not quite vegan and isn't what they would eat, and so it leads to dissatisfaction, even they're already in it. That's not a great image for those who become vegan to experience an upset community.

However, it doesn't have to apply to veganism only, as this could apply to just about any cause. So the discussion remains: should the focus for support go towards those already in a cause and bettering their ability to be in it, or those who are unaware or not participating in the cause and try to bring them in?

Discussion Topology

Activism Organization SocialMovement Society Sociology Justice

Participants Claims Contributions Votes

vegforlife 7 18 0

feelsamnesia 1 1 0