Background

These technologies might exist in reality or as an idea (like a patent), but aren't put into use for what it was proposed to do nor adopted by those that are meant to use it.

Many inventions have been created in the past that served great benefits to society. This discussion's purpose is to continue that momentum by everyone providing their ideas for inventions to solve issues that need to be working on and would provide the most benefit in the future, so inventors have ideas (along with a gauge of demand) to work with and start developing concepts end up actually getting created.
