

Post: Breweries make six-pack rings eco-friendly

Created by Brittany Bunk on 22-Jan-2022

 Article

 Animal Rights, Environment

12

0

1

0

Content

originally posted: 8-30-20

Saltwater Brewery Creates Edible Six-Pack Rings

"The devastating effects that plastic six-pack rings can have to both wildlife and the environment have been proven time and time again. While many iterations of the packaging have been seen over the years, here's a look at a very creative and sustainable alternative to the standard six-pack ring."

Read more: <https://www.craftbeer.com/editors-picks/saltwater-brewery-creates-edible-six-pack-rings>

Corona Becomes First Big Beer Brand to Trial Plastic-Free Rings

"Corona will pilot 100 percent plastic-free six pack rings in select markets—the first global beer brand to attempt the switch after moves from smaller beer companies."

The plant-based rings will be piloted in Tulum, Mexico—Corona's homeland—at the beginning of 2019.

Corona's move is part of a larger effort with the environmental organization Parley for the Oceans to switch to eco-friendly packaging to help curb plastic pollution, according to a press release."

Read more: <https://www.ecowatch.com/corona-biodegradable-beer-rings-2622389922.html>

Comments

Be the first to comment

