Investing series: Part 1. Parts 2, 3, and 4 over here.

This got too big - I put it all into an excel. Some links may not be there anymore, but it's not a big deal - they're not super crucial. For further details, see the first tab.

Might be too hard to find, so I'm putting here: thank you Prad Basu for creating the software to help filter and find vegan stocks in the large lists.

Disclaimers:

- investing carries risk - you're responsible for your own risk. This is just a list to make it easier to find vegan means to invest in.
- It's always best not to put any money in investments that one is not worried about losing and never getting back.
- Please avoid buying the same stocks that I own - because I have a personal bias and look to it as a source of profit and doing so might make me profit off of saying which stocks I own, which might also be illegal in addition to causing a person to feel defrauded, setup, and trapped if they lose money. If you do choose to buy stocks I own without me knowing about it and lose money, because I sold at a profit, that is not my legal responsibility, as I already warned against it. I, as an investor, am allowed to take profits from any investments I own, regardless of what others do, but when others tell me about stocks they buy because of me, then I can't sell for a profit and lose money. So it's best to avoid telling me about what stocks (including and especially specific ones) are purchased, when, why, etc. Also avoid doing this type of stock purchasing with other individuals to avoid negative and possibly illegal financial power dynamics. I'm just here to show what vegan investments are possible, so hopefully collectively we each can take on (that we each can't do ourselves) financial responsibilities in helping out the vegan economy grow in a way that hopefully makes everyone a profit. If not a profit, at the very least the satisfaction of moving veganism one step closer to its ideal.
- some vegan stocks are scams - I left them off this list or at least made a note of it inside
- just because it says or looks vegan, doesn't mean it actually is supporting vegan companies can help put them in a great position to potentially (no guarantee) help relief efforts in Ukraine. You support them economically if not in person or militarily.

major overhaul - updated stock tickers, removed non-vegan stocks, added mostly Canadian OTCs, reorganized, added plantations (was super impressed with Kahawatte Plantation that converted to more eco-friendly tea from coffee that didn't work), etc.

I've been adding so many stocks that now there are categories. It's still getting updated, especially with so many new industries coming out. I have yet to add the biodiesel companies, but the new categories will help discern one type of stock from another - especially for non-existent companies that would be not worth investing in but still are listed for reference's sake the first link's in my other article, but it's not an indicator of what's vegan, just what's not. I'll add the 2nd link though to this - thanks!

Thanks. It would be nice to add www.crueltyfreeinvesting.org and veganinvestors.com to this list.
