What will life look like once humans achieve longer lifespans?

SUGGESTED THE SIS

Much fewer children. There will no longer be a biological need to pass on genes to the next generation, or at least the need/desire will be greatly reduced.

The quality of life on Earth will decrease due to overpopulation.

SUGGESTED PRO

The world population will increase , there after food becomes limited , this will lead to killing of animals for food , the world becomes more polluted . if we live 1000 years eventually the earth will transformed to hell

What will life look like once humans achieve longer lifespans?

SUGGESTED THE SIS

Improved, with extra past knowledge, people would be able to still make healthy choices, and a better life because they lived longer more healthy, and would have much more time that could be dedicated to expanding technology, meaning life if people achieved longer lifespans, would be healthier and life or human society rather would look more futuristic

What will life look like once humans achieve longer lifespans?

SUGGESTED THE SIS

We won't achieve longer lifespans because the quality of life after about 100 will be too low (loss of mental capacity, incontinence, limited mobility, poor eyesight, poor hearing, pain, death of all our friends etc) and we will choose to die.
