

- Debater1702 (3)

The music of the past was better than music generated more recently (i.e. post-90s/00s).

SUGGESTED PRO

Back in the days music has got effort to make nowadays music sucks
- Debater1702 (3)

There are many songs from the past that were not great.

SUGGESTED CON

That is not true
- JamesTDD (134)

Newer music is unoriginal, as it tends to be a rejuvenation of old music (the original) to a newer audience (like remakes). The reason is that the older music has more variety (one reason is from experimentation), which the newer music lacks and decides to rip off of older music instead of create something new.

SUGGESTED PRO

The Dubstep genre of music is just the a remix of the Electronic genre with a bunch more random sounds.
- JamesTDD (134)

Newer music is unoriginal, as it tends to be a rejuvenation of old music (the original) to a newer audience (like remakes). The reason is that the older music has more variety (one reason is from experimentation), which the newer music lacks and decides to rip off of older music instead of create something new.

SUGGESTED PRO

A lot of modern music are just remakes that sound horrible.
- Old (9)

The music of the past was better than music generated more recently (i.e. post-90s/00s).

SUGGESTED CON

Music is generational, and every generation has its own music. Today's music is just (loud?) wallpaper music. I like mine you like yours.
- shutup (27)

The music of the past was better than music generated more recently (i.e. post-90s/00s).

SUGGESTED PRO

At least old music tried to cover up the meaning of the song and each song was different.
- LDC (1)

The music of the past was better than music generated more recently (i.e. post-90s/00s).

SUGGESTED CON

It is not an objective statement, it just depends on the person
- Laccuse (2)

It's not that it's better, but just more familiar (i.e. nostalgic).

SUGGESTED PRO

nostalgia influences the claim that old music is better
- Nils2004 (1)

Quantitatively, more music is being produced now than ever before. Of course, qualitatively, this would mean that more good music is being produced.

SUGGESTED PRO

I agree with your point, but today, more music than ever is being produced. More songs than you even can listen to is produced. Almost every week, Billie Eilish is making a new song. In the past, this never happened to anyone. A band or singer only did like one song in a month. The music sound was even better in the past. There wasn't electronic music which today is almost in every song.
- Nils2004 (1)

The music of the past was better than music generated more recently (i.e. post-90s/00s).

SUGGESTED PRO

I agree with your point, but today, more music than ever is being produced. More songs than you even can listen to is produced. Almost every week, Billie Eilish is making a new song. In the past, this never happened to anyone. A band or singer only did like one song in a month. The music sound was even better in the past. There wasn't electronic music which today is almost in every song.
- DareOpposeMe (2)

Most people who lived through the older music (and vice versa) base their beliefs on a closed mind (as they don't listen to much new music) and justify their beliefs through bias (like cherry-picking songs, which anyone can do - even those who say new music's better). However, this is a opinionated viewpoint, as when looking at all the songs objectively, they would see that each side has about equal quality.

SUGGESTED PRO

I have to say, early childhood years. New music sounded better than older music, at age 14 soon realized that to be IMMENSELY WRONG! Old music, not just rock, is fairly more superior.
- deactivated-64a2d75 (235)

Because of the artificiality made by artists per individual customer due to streaming services, artists now need to appeal to a wider audience to generate the same profit as before. Thus, they need to produce better music now to reach a higher level of engagement to achieve the same success as their previous music releases.

SUGGESTED CON

Music that appeals to more people isn't necessarily better. Music is a personal subjective experience that is different for differing people and cultures. There isn't a single factor that determines music to be good.
- deactivated-64a2d75 (235)

Because of the artificiality made by artists per individual customer due to streaming services, artists now need to appeal to a wider audience to generate the same profit as before. Thus, they need to produce better music now to reach a higher level of engagement to achieve the same success as their previous music releases.

SUGGESTED PRO

Streaming services have reduced the number of records sold and increased the number of listeners needed to make the same amount of profit from a song
- librario (3)

The music of the past was better than music generated more recently (i.e. post-90s/00s).

SUGGESTED CON

The music of the past is collectively part of the music of today, and the future. The culture of past music resonates throughout modern music through remakes, sampling, and stylistic influence. In recent decades, due largely in part from the internet, music has exploded into hundreds of genres and sub-genres, often redefining what the word music even means.
- guzmagia000 (1)

The music of the past was better than music generated more recently (i.e. post-90s/00s).

SUGGESTED PRO

Music in the past was a bit more creative in way? I mean that sort of beat and sound wise. It wasn't the same tune-let. Music today is sort of the same, you hear sort of the same thing - music today is great, but just not as good as past music.
- experiment1 (10)

The music of the past was better than music generated more recently (i.e. post-90s/00s).

SUGGESTED CON

Music is and will always be a reflection of society, culture, values and generation. Right now, there are rap songs that utilize rhythm, tangential associations and word play in a style not seen in other genres.
- deactivated-6pwtudr (63)

The music of the past was better than music generated more recently (i.e. post-90s/00s).

SUGGESTED PRO

M. Ahh, "no possible duplicate claims".
- meszy (270)

Newer of good music is troublesome.

SUGGESTED CON

Pop music is a small fraction of music created today.

PERPECTIVE: All

Following Share

The music of the past was better than music generated more recently (i.e. post-90s/00s).

SUGGESTED CON

Music is generational, and every generation has its own music. Today's music is just (loud?) wallpaper music. I like mine you like yours.

Accept Reply

Pros Cons