

Show hidden and archived suggestions

4mo ago Serge S (21)

It's not as personal.

SUGGESTED PRO Human memory consist not only of image and sound, but it also contain smells, and actions. And those two cannot be simply replicated by any e-means

4mo ago jevocska (3)

E-vacations (i.e. virtual travel) can replace real ones.

SUGGESTED CON All sort of information (images, descriptions) can be found on the internet, but tourism hasn't declined. People are still interested in the world.

4mo ago jevocska (3)

E-vacations (i.e. virtual travel) can replace real ones.

SUGGESTED CON E-tools can't replace genuine experiences.

5mo ago khayash1349 (19)

There are just some experiences that can't be replicated digitally.

SUGGESTED PRO You can experience everything the best when you see it live because you can use more senses (like smell).

6mo ago Runrunriver (38)

E-vacations (i.e. virtual travel) can replace real ones.

SUGGESTED CON Can virtual sex replace real sex? Most likely NEVER. It would defeat our biological purpose on Earth just like e-travelling would dissolve sensorial perceptions of our 5 senses, we would be visiting a dull world. However, I am not denying the size of pornography market.

8mo ago The Snailman (12)

There are just some experiences that can't be replicated digitally.

SUGGESTED PRO Some vacation activities cannot be digitally reproduced, like hiking, rock climbing, skiing, or anything else that requires a specific physical object or area.

9mo ago deactivated-wqi89gx (3)

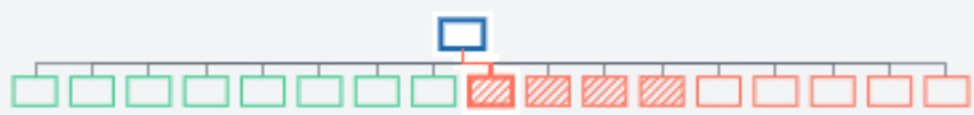

E-vacations (i.e. virtual travel) can replace real ones.

SUGGESTED CON It would lake away the real experience process of going there and exploring it. Getting from place to place on feet.

1y ago Toobiased (1k)

Vacationing purists won't like the idea of people taking e-vacations nor going on them themselves, because it's not a true, authentic experience at the location spot in that moment for that person in reality.

SUGGESTED PRO You can not feel the mild breeze on your skin and hair when you walk by the sea.

E-vacations (i.e. virtual travel) can replace real ones.

4mo ago jevocska (3) Invite
SUGGESTED CON All sort of information (images, descriptions) can be found on the internet, but tourism hasn't declined. People are still interested in the world.
Accept Reply

Pros Cons

My Kialo Explore

Kialo Release Notes Careers

Help Center Contact Us