Pros	Cons
It'll make it easier for authors to release their content into the public domain.	Copyright laws are there to protect the authors/creators from copying and stealing of original ideas.
People can freely share what they know without worries about it being copied by someone else maliciously and them getting into trouble from it (as no side can get into trouble anymore if it's always permitted).
Content providers would be less afraid of lawsuits for providing content (even if they're able to legally), due to a better understanding of their capabilities (i.e. less confusion).
Free access to all materials actually encourages people to buy more from authors than less.
