

People should rely on money to survive.

Pros	Cons
People running countries need money in order to trade with other countries for necessary imports.	Just because someone has money, doesn't mean they know what to do with it nor make the decisions to make those happen, so people should rely on what provides those instead.
Money allows tasks to be done that normally would not move forward without money.	People can't take money with them when they die. Thus, more time should be spent living life than being preoccupied with money, only to never use it.
People need money to survive.	Money can't buy everything, so it's better to try to attain those needs without money than to work really hard at acquiring it only to find out the unrealistic purchase expectation can't happen.
	A lot of what used to cost money is now free. So people do not need to occupy their lifestyles around money to get what they want out of life like they used to.
