

Students should be allowed to skip grades.

Pros	Cons
SUGGESTED PRO Yes... Advancement in education is always needed. Let them learn and perhaps the teachers of the future will shine a bit more brightly. Boredom for a student leaves us looking as : trying to disarm the Good Guy. aka a bit nutty.	SUGGESTED CON If you skip grades you would not get friends and you will miss out on fun
SUGGESTED PRO The whole point of school is to learn, if you already have the requirement for the age.	SUGGESTED CON Although the student demonstrated their academic ability, highly over the average among students of their grade. They still need to confidently grasp on to all subject matter, one step at a time. This also depends on the factors that play in to why they are performing so well
Forcing accelerating students who wish to learn into unchallenging environments puts them against human nature (i.e. trying to expand current knowledge of the world around themselves).	Skipping grades prevents students from getting in-depth learning on subjects, thus leading them to be unprepared when tackling the higher grade level curriculums they would go into.
Students should not have to get stuck in academia for too long in their life if they want to do more significant personal life changes sooner, like research or get a job.	School teachers should come up with mechanisms like accelerated curriculum and extra credit assignment when some students in class need more of a challenge.
Students are less bored.	Students who skip grades are exposed to more bullying in school.
If a person is already competent in a subject, they should be able to skip it instead of relearn it.	Their age would not match up with other students, which can create negative impacts, that are unseen with not skipping grades.
	If people skip grades, they miss out on social experiences that define one's childhood.
